

Provide Read Only Account Access to Your Financial Advisor

Follow these simple steps if you wish to provide your financial advisor with read-only access to your Max account. By enabling your advisor to view your cash balances, they will be able to provide you with more holistic advice to help you manage all aspects of your portfolio.

Adding your financial advisor to your Max account is as easy as entering their email address. You can do so upon initial Max account setup, or later on by updating your Profile page.

New Members:

- When you create your member profile, you will be offered the option to add your financial advisor at the bottom of the screen

Create Your Member Profile

I would like to give my financial advisor read-only access to my account balances. (optional)

- Check the box next to "I would like to give my financial advisor read-only access to my account balances"
- The window will expand so that you may enter your advisor's name and email address

FINANCIAL ADVISOR (OPTIONAL)

To facilitate your personal financial planning, you may choose to give your financial advisor read-only access to your personal and financial information held by Max. This may include, without limitation, your name, email address, linked account balances, current optimization status and settings, and 1099-INT statements. You may revoke your consent at any time by unchecking the box below.
